Try to always speak calmly and slowly

Use simple short sentences where you can and avoid asking direct and multiple questions

Keep choices you offer to no more than 2 or 3 options

Don't interrupt the person when they are speaking or try to finish their sentence

Listen...

Engage positively with the person who is speaking

Listen for clues (confusion, focus on past events as if they were happening now, repetitions)

Try to identify the distraction or issue that is upsetting the person

Your Body Language...

Smile warmly and show friendliness

Maintain eye contact but do not stare

Only get as close as the person is comfortable with

Your Environment...

Try to limit noise and distraction

Keep room temperature at a comfortable level

Keeping the room well-lit helps with communication

Managing Changes...

Being more forgetful and failing to recognise everyday objects is not unusual

You may have to help the person to move around – even in familiar places

Try not to contradict someone who is confused – find a way around the issue or try to distract them until it passes

Be aware that the person may not be able to understand directions

Making Choices...

Offering choice is important but keep the number of options limited (2 or 3 maximum)

Try to make the options real for the person

Predictability...

Keep changes of furniture and layout to a minimum to reduce confusion

Contact with familiar faces and at regular times of day build routine and can help reduce confusion

Please remember that living with Dementia means that everyday could be different. A range of factors can affect how those living with dementia and their carers react to situations.

Make the most of the opportunities each day brings. Engage with your local community and if you need to seek the support of the agencies and services which are there to help.
